

JAPAN PLANS GREAT NAVAL DISPLAY TO FRIGHTEN CHINA

More Than 20 Nipponese
Warships Sail Up the Whangtuo River

BLUEJACKETS LANDED

Two Score More Crafts Ready
To Steam to Yangtze, Enroute To Hankow

By International News Service

Japan plans to cow China with the greatest display of naval might in Chinese waters since the World War, diplomatic quarters in London understood today, as 20 more Nipponese warships sailed up the Whangtuo River toward Shanghai.

Developments:

1. Reinforcements brought total of Japanese warships in or near Shanghai to 32. Bluejackets were landed as soon as they arrived.

2. Two score more Japanese naval craft were ready to steam up the Yangtze, past Nanking, to Hankow, for a demonstration. Foreigners feared that a bombardment might result if any more anti-Japanese incidents occur.

3. While foreign diplomats strove to settle peacefully the killing of two Japanese naval men near Shanghai, the Japanese foreign office warned that "the future demands on Japanese—if China means to aggravate the situation, Japan will respond."

4. Plans to push a Northern China wing back into Chahar and split the Chahar forces from those of Shensi, a large Japanese column would take an airplane push Northwest from Peiping, ready to battle Chinese at Hankow Pass in the great wall.

"So Refined" To Be Given By the Sarobia Players

"So Refined," a new play by E. B. Dewing Kaup, will be presented by the Sarobia Country Theatre Friday and Saturday nights.

The comedy will have its premiere Friday night at the Sarobians' outdoor theatre on the Eddington estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Loran. In the audience will be many New York managers and producers, including Daniel Frohman, "grand old man of the American theatre," and representatives of motion picture companies.

The play was written originally as a vehicle for Mrs. Minnie Madden Fiske and she was extremely fond of the comedy, saying it was "full of such real, everyday people." She was reading it prior to putting it into rehearsal when she died.

Helen Pratt will assume the role of Mrs. Girard, the part intended for Mrs. Fiske. Other leads are taken by Elizabeth Dewing, daughter of the author and late of "Stage Door." Richard Manning and Monte Meacham. Supporting roles are in the hands of Juan Root, Mary Myers, Anthony Dwyer, Elinor Adams, Alice Nevin, Mildred Cox and Carman Jones.

The play is being directed by Clyde Robinson.

Miss Kaup is the author of many successful novels, the latest being "Eagles Fly High," "My Son John" and "A Big Horse to Ride." Her last play to see production was "Don't Bother Mother" presented on Broadway several years ago.

Insufficient Rainfall

Philadelphia, Aug. 11—One-third of the state received insufficient rainfall last week, and as a result the top soil in the areas has become very dry, the U. S. Department of Agriculture reported today in its weekly synopsis of weather and crop conditions in Pennsylvania.

In those regions where less than half an inch of rain fell, shallow rooting crops have sufficient moisture, the report stated.

It added "For example, alfalfa is still good because its roots reach down into the sub-soil, but the timothy and clovers are drying out."

Bristol Rotarians Meet At the Thorne Cabin

Bristol Rotarians journeyed to Pipersville yesterday afternoon where they held their regular weekly meeting at the cabin of Mr. and Mrs. Lester D. Thorne, "Trail's End." The meeting day was moved up to Tuesday, instead of the customary Thursday, in order that more members might find it convenient to make the trip.

Frank Volt, president, was in charge of the meeting. Quilts and baseball were played by members who all reported having a splendid afternoon.

Announcement was made that the meeting next week, which will be held at the home of Mrs. Grupp, along the Delaware River at Eddington, will be attended by the district governor of Rotary, Samuel Shanahan. The visit next Thursday will mark the annual official visit of the district governor. Before the meeting he will meet with the Board of Governors of the local club and also with the committee chairmen.

4500 SCHOOLS MERGED SINCE 1890 IN STATE

State Council of Education Charged With Encouragement of the Move

175,000 PUPILS ATTEND

HARRISBURG, Aug. 11—The State Council of Education at its last meeting received a report by Dr. Lee L. Driver, recently retired Chief of the Division of Consolidation and Transportation in the Department of Public Instruction, which shows approximately 4500 schools merged since 1890 into 881 consolidated schools.

The merging of schools in Pennsylvania, while in progress for almost half a century, was adopted as a Department of Public Instruction policy in 1919. The State Council of Education was charged with the encouragement of this movement. In the same Legislature that this commission was passed virtually prohibiting the rebuilding or remodeling of one-room schools if merging were feasible. The right of school directors to close any school for practically any purpose or the mandate to close any school having an average daily attendance of ten or less than ten, was the basis upon which the administration of merging was placed.

The 881 consolidated schools are attended by approximately 175,000 children. This attendance includes children in consolidated junior high schools, but does not include those in senior high schools. It is significant to note that in no case in the entire State has a consolidated school ever been abandoned to return to the one-teacher system.

With proper administration and financial encouragement, the report states, the number of one-room schools in the State could be reduced from its present number of approximately 6000 to not more than 1000. There are 2300 rural school districts in Pennsylvania.

The principal reason for the increasing trend toward school mergers is that it offers better opportunities to apply modern presentation of material of instruction and effective school administration to the rural school problem than any other form of reorganization. For this reason the policy of the State Council has been to advocate larger units rather than smaller ones.

HOWES WIN TROPHY

NEWTOWN, Aug. 11—The annual field day of the Bucks County Holstein Breeders Association was held Saturday at the farm of L. P. Satterthwaite, near here. Approximately 100 dairymen and their families attended.

In charge of the judging contests was Joseph Nageotte, Pennsylvania State College expert, who served as the official judge. Winners in the adult class were Hugo Matthes and Joseph O. Canby, Hulmeville, and Harry F. Landes, Richlandtown.

Junior contest winners included Mabel Satterthwaite, Yardley; Harold Bryan, Perkasie; Raymond Gross, Plumsteadville, and Walter Landes, Richlandtown.

Following a lunch period, Mr. Nageotte staged a hoof trimming demonstration and showed methods of putting a rope on cows and throwing them the proper way in order to trim their hoofs.

A feature of the field day was the round-up of the Edgewood 4-H Dairy Club. For six of the members it was their sixth annual roundup. Winners in the aged cow class were Jean Wright, Yardley, first; John Wright, second; William Satterthwaite, third, and Mabel Satterthwaite, fourth.

William Satterthwaite placed first and Ira Wright second in the two-year-old class.

John Wright placed first in the yearling class.

Calf class winners follow: James Howes, first; William Satterthwaite, second; John Wright, third, and William Satterthwaite, fourth.

The grand champion animal, an aged cow, was shown by Jean Wright. The Charles Cook trophy for the best grown and best fitted animal was won by James Howes, Morrisville, with his calf.

J. R. Danks, of the State Hospital Farms, Norristown, as the speaker, spoke on his 15 years' experience with blood testing for Bang's disease.

Jesse Kurtz, Carlisle, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Holstein Association, reported on the activities of the State organization.

The Edgewood Calf Club conducted under the supervision of County Agent William F. Greenawald who was present.

An inspection of the herd was made.

Court Directs Clients To Pay Debts to Loan Co.

Three Trentonians were directed by Trenton City District Court Judge French to pay judgments to the Safe-guard Finance Company, of Morrisville, on loans not completely paid back.

Each of the defendants, Joseph Raywood, Charles W. Cook and Philip Mattei, complained the judgments were in excess of the amounts they borrowed.

The court explained that under the contracts interest charges were included. Raymond must pay $81.04, Cook, $91.42, and Mattei, $73.07.

$30,000 Fire at Willow Grove

Willow Grove, Aug. 11—The lumber yard of J. Dyre Moyer, in the center of the business section here, was destroyed by flames today at an estimated loss of $30,000. A dozen firemen were injured.

Many residents of the area were forced to flee their homes in nightclothes, as the blaze threatened to spread. The flames gained such rapid headway that a general alarm, the first in Willow Grove in seven years, was sounded. It brought apparatus from stations at Abington, Jenkintown, Ambler, Haverhill, Wilton and Roseland. Only a favorable wind kept the fire from spreading to Willow Grove Amusement Park, firemen said.

Guffey to Run for Governor

Harrisburg, Aug. 11—Persistent rumors lent credence today to observations of veteran capitol hill political seers, that the high command of the state Democratic organization, has virtually decided upon U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey, as its gubernatorial choice in 1938.

Under the reported plan, Guffey's running mate for the Senatorial seat held by Rep. James J. Davis, would be Lt. Governor Thomas Kennedy, a powerful labor leader, and official of the United Mine Workers of America.

Observers believe the plan was the result of a deal between the Pennsylvania's majority members of the U. S. Senate, and Governor Earle, whereby the present chief executive of the commonwealth would be appointed to fill out Guffey's unexpired term in return for his support in the big gubernatorial race.

SISTERSHIP OF ILL-FATED "HINDENBURG" WILL TAKE TO AIR FOR TRIAL FLIGHTS IN APRIL, 1938; CONSTRUCTION CHANGED FOR USE OF HELIUM

Ship Will Be Used Mostly On North Atlantic Service — Distance Much Less Than To South America — Save 20 Tons On Fuel Alone

By International News Service

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Aug. 11.—(INS).—The new German dirigible "LZ 130," sistership of the ill-fated "Hindenburg" will take the air for its first trial flights in April, next year. Certain changes of construction which have become necessary to make the ship fit for use of helium gas will cause this delay of about six months.

After a series of trial flights over Germany, the LZ 130, the first German dirigible filled with American helium gas, will start on its first test flight to the United States.

According to preliminary decisions of the Dirigible Company here, the ship will mostly be used on the North Atlantic service, because the distance to the United States is only about 6,000 kilometers while the South American route previously flown by the now laid-up Graf Zeppelin is 10,000 kilometers. For the shorter route, to North America the ship needs only 40 tons of fuel, whereas 60 tons are required for flights to South America.

BUCKS BANKERS SEE MONTGOMERY CO. FARMS

GET HEARTY WELCOME

Bucks County bankers enjoyed a very successful farm tour on Monday when they visited a number of places in Montgomery county as part of the annual tour.

The tour members assembled at Montgomeryville and proceeded first to the poultry farm of M. M. West, near Lansdale. Here the visitors observed a modern poultry plant, with a large farm barn converted into a three story laying house, where a total of 2400 laying hens are housed during the winter months. These are all raised on the farm and are at present on range as pullets. Numerous brooder houses are scattered over the range, also a number of large laying houses of the "Michigan" type. In some of these Mr. West now has February hatched pullets busily engaged in production at this time. Visitors were interested in a peculiar guard attached to the bill of each pullet, which is designed to avoid cannibalism, a very common weakness of Leghorns, and yet does not hinder normal eating habits.

White Leghorns are raised exclusively on this farm, which also maintains its own incubator plant, where fifty to sixty thousand day-old chickens are produced each season. The incubators are of 20,000 egg capacity.

Mr. West conducts the farm exclusively as a commercial proposition, using every means to save labor and decrease overhead expenses. The farm and all equipment has been paid for by the poultry within the past years since the business was organized. The largest part of the cash income is derived from the sale of eggs, which are sold to hucksters and also at the egg auction at Centre Point.

The second stop was made at the Normandy Farms of Ralph Beaver Strassburger, prominent politician

TRAILER COLONY FAMILIES ARE ENJOYING LIFE

Daily Routine Is About Same
As If Abodes Were In Regulation Houses

THINK WELL OF SITE

Bristol trailer colony's population, 14 in all, is thoroughly enjoying the breezes of the Delaware, and each individual member of the "town on wheels" pursues his or her individual hobby and form of exercise and relaxation just as if they were residing in a regulation house.

Knitting, crocheting, scrap-book making, bathing, bicycling, motor trips, visits to historic points—these are the interests of the members of the five families located on the triangular section of land bounded by Green Lane, the highway and Radcliffe street.

And the ages of the trailerites range from 3½ years to 60 plus. And each and everyone is a "rooter" for trailer life. Some are enjoying their Summer vacation thusly; others are making their homes in the trailers for the summer period; and for some this is the first experience.

The five families are as follows: Mr. and Mrs. George Coates, and Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Coates and son David, 3½, formerly of Miami, Florida; Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Neale, of Hollywood, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Stineman and son Vern, originally of Indianapolis, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bright and daughter and son, Caroline and Thomas, Miami, Fla.

The latter family, Mr. and Mrs. Bright and children, are on Summer vacation, and according to one member of the family "We are certainly enjoying it. We are visiting in particular the historic points of interest, and the trip is a very educational one, for both the children and us." Caroline is a student in a Miami high school, and Thomas is in junior high. This is their first trip North since they are old enough to realize the joys and value of travel. For Mrs. Bright it will be her first trip to Northern New England.

The Bright family plans to go to New Jersey, New York and the New England states, then across New York to Indiana, down through Kentucky, Alabama to Florida. Three months will be consumed in the trip, and approximately two weeks are being passed in

HAUSANCE DRIVER

When a couple of cars are where they should be, at the crossing mark and waiting to get away with the change of lights, he maneuvers his machine into a narrow opening, between the right driver and the curb, and without stopping entirely is ready to be off like a bat out of Gehenna with the amber.

His is usually a new, light rig that accelerates rapidly, but not always, and if the driver to his left is unaware of the quarterback sneak being perpetrated by his side, and is something of a getaway artist himself, there is a second or so when anything can happen in the way of hooked bumpers and worse. If there are cars parked along the curb in the block ahead, someone must lag to the rear to straighten the line, and if neither of the drivers concerned is inclined to be accommodating, then St. Peter waits poised pen for a new registrant at the pearly gate.

In "If I Had a Million," W. C. Fields took his unexpected wealth and bought up old and heavy hacks with which he cruised the highways in the role of Fool Killer, bringing grief to half a dozen typical specimens of the driving boob. We felt at the time he should have included the end-around showoff, who gets into your hair when he isn't getting into your fenders.

REASONABLE TRADE

One of the losses which business people have to take, comes through the habit of returning goods to the stores. People will wear things for days, and then expect stores to take them back. Even if they are brought back at once, it costs something to carry on the transaction, and the store should be compensated for that loss.

Before you take anything back to a store, ask yourself if your claim is a reasonable one. Merchants of course will favor when they are liberal in such matters and give people a chance to examine goods in their homes. But they should not be asked to go to added expense because people make errors in judgment, or if they are forced to go to such expense, people should expect to compensate them for it.

WHY WORRY?

A score of years ago worry stories were among the surest sellers to certain magazines that made high-brow pretensions by including in each issue at least one article discussing economic questions. The besetting fear of the time was that humanity, and particularly the branch of it resident in the United States would run out of something.

We were rapidly going short on necessities in those days, if the professional prognosticators were to be believed. They had it all figured out; Coal was to last 20 years; oil would trickle out in 30 years; the forests would be used up in 10 years, and the population would increase to tax the resources of the farms at no specified time but soon.

It is a pleasant thought that perhaps the worries of the present year may prove as baseless as were those of 20 years ago.

We don't know about any contribution to science, but Prof. Piccard aloft with a bunch of balloons gives a rough idea of the hitherto of tomorrow.

"More Than Love"

by LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

COPYRIGHT 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"He deserved killing—don't talk, sit quietly, I will see you through."

Leland Forbes, author of many volumes about bird life, has met Jeanette Morse, who illustrates his books, until they come together by accident in Virginia. They promptly fall madly and sincerely in love. They plan an early marriage and then Leland's sister, Lola, whose husband is a worthless brute, sends for him. She is too proud to let the world know that her baby son has such a worthless father and Leland promises never to tell. A few days before Leland and Jeanette are to be married Lola comes to her brother and begs him to take her away and hide her, for she has killed her husband. To protect his sister Leland agrees and sends a note to Jeanette telling her he must go away and cannot explain why.

CHAPTER III.

Lola was fast losing her nerve. "You mustn't write notes—no one must ever know where I am, Lee!" she cried.

"No one will ever know," he assured her. "Remember, you are a Forbes—keep your head and your nerve."

"But think—I have killed my son's father!"

"He deserved killing. Don't talk, sit quietly. I will see you through. I must plan. I must make it appear as though I had gone into Northern Canada."

"But, Lee—think—I shot him—he was going to kill me. It was self defense, but his cruel relatives will—"

She broke down at last and Forbes knew enough to let her have her agony of weeping over; she would be calm and sane again.

He wasn't bitter. He loved his sister, his twin and the only other one of his family left, but she wasn't suffering all of the agony. What of his beloved Jeanette?

And he felt that he couldn't tell her now—it was too dangerous. His unfortunate sister must be saved, his little nephew must never grow up to know that his mother was a murderer.

Lola had her own Gethsemane right then. He could never tell her now about Jeanette and his marriage plans, all so swiftly sent into chaos.

He sat silently, trying to plan. He must get her away before daylight, for it was known that he was her brother; they would come directly to his place to see if Lola had come to him.

Lola was trying to overcome her hysteria of sobs. On his bed lay his innocent little nephew, down in Connecticut in the Forbes homestead lay Lola's husband—dead by her hand.

Only a man of strong nerves, like Leland, could have thought coherently through this to a plan of safety.

He recalled all of the "wanted" people caught because of some woman. No, he could never tell Jeanette the truth for, all innocently, she might say something to give him away and put the authorities on his trail.

He wrote a memo for tickets to Montreal and left it on his desk. He also left a Canadian Pacific time table beside it. This would give an impression that he had taken that route. Then he packed a suitcase, putting into it the pitifully few things of his own and baby's that Lola had brought. He would not call a taxi. Instead he took little Leland, his baby nephew, and the suitcase, ordered Lola to come with him and appear unconcerned, and they walked half a dozen blocks away before taking a taxi.

He bought tickets for Richmond, knowing that he would get off at Baltimore and go another route. Fortunately he got a compartment. Once inside Lola whispered, fearing to raise her voice, "Leland, it's dangerous to take me to your Wytheville place, they know you have it; they'll follow."

"I'm not going there—please trust me. I am going into the Grayson hills—I know them there and they know and trust me. Most of them are moonshiners. They have been making moonshine for fifty years there. In such a hidden locality that no revenue officer ever found them, we shall be entirely safe."

"No woman ever had so wonderful a brother," she said, and to his delight, she went to sleep.

The next morning they had changed trains and were rolling down through the Roanoke Valley.

When Jeanette Morse received the note from Leland she naturally couldn't make a thing out of it. But she had a feeling, woman's intuition perhaps, that it was a very grave matter.

She went directly to the office of Mr. Maxin and asked him if he had received any message from Mr. Forbes. He looked at her queerly for a moment and parried with, "Did you?"

She handed him the note Forbes had written her and in turn, he showed her this one:

"I must disappear for reasons I can never explain. I shall continue to write, but under the name of Paul Justin. My copy will be mailed from Portland, Oregon, but I assure you I shall not be there or within thousands of miles of there.

LELAND FORBES.

"What do you make of it?" Jeanette asked, anxiously. Old Mr. Maxin was sorely troubled.

"It is something serious, else he would never have done this to me and especially to you."

"I know it is, but, Mr. Maxin, I have full faith in Leland Forbes and I shall trust him implicitly. Some day he will explain."

"He says in his note he can never explain."

"Not in my note—and I trust him. I—"

Jeanette turned and hurried out, lest the old man see the tears that suddenly came to her eyes.

Meanwhile the second train took Leland, his poor sister and the baby on through Wytheville and to a little platform called "Crocketts" where trains stopped only on signal or to let off passengers.

In Roanoke Leland had secured a newspaper. It carried a brief article with this head:

Vance Harlow Shot Dead in Home; Wife and Son Missing

Leland let Lola see it, for he knew it would be better. Here, as they got off at this platform in the woods, Leland was delighted to see Harvey Orson, a native of Grayson Hills. He rushed up, shook hands, winked at him and said: "I was sure you would meet me and my wife, Harvey."

Orson understood that something was up and played the game. He got his freight, took them in his wagon and drove away over the rough road up into the lonely hills.

Once the deep forest settled around them and the hills hid any habitation for miles, Lola felt more at ease.

Leland knew these moonshining mountaineers and liked them. They trusted him thoroughly, although they thought he was rather cracked to be writing about birds all the time. They never asked questions and resented any questions being asked.

"Harvey," Leland said to Orson, "this is my sister and her baby. They are hiding out. Tell everyone in the hills that we are hiding out and that no one is ever to mention a word."

"Mister Forbes, I reckon you can trust me all," he answered, and Leland assured his sister that they were safe.

"There's the Burgess place—he died and she married Sam Jackson—you can live in that, hit's plum off the trail."

Harvey Orson's wife brought over temporary bedding, food and dishes and Orson went to Abington and then to Bristol during the next few days, buying all that was needed in the way of bedding, clothing, preserved food and the like.

Moreover, Orson agreed to leave fresh milk daily, and eggs, bread, bacon and vegetables twice a week. By the time they were settled in a room partitioned off for Lola, Leland felt that his sister was sufficiently herself to give him some details.

Everything seemed perfectly secure. Adams, Leland's lawyer, handled his business, sent his writings to an Oregon lawyer to be mailed back to the publishing house, and looked after the estate in Connecticut.

So, when Leland asked for details, promising never to bring it up again, she told him.

"Vance demanded that I sign a paper," she said, "ordering you to turn my share over to my own management. Lily was out—my maid. He threatened to beat me and when I refused he struck me. I ran to my room but stopped as I passed through the library and got Vance's revolver, for I feared he would use it on me. If I had only let it alone—"

"He would have used it on you, Lola—you were right."

"He pounded on my door and threatened to kill me. Then he went away. I heard the front door slam and the car motor start and after a long while I packed the little bag, took my baby and started to get out and come to you. I wrote a note telling him that I was leaving forever and left it on the library table. Just then Vance stepped in. I knew he was going to beat me, so I put baby on the divan—he would have struck me even if I held baby. I dreaded the beating and took the revolver from my handbag to scare him away."

"Put, Lola, you could have claimed self defense for you and baby," her brother said.

"With no witnesses? And with his relatives all to testify that I had threatened to kill him? They hated me; they would have perjured themselves to send me to the chair."

"Yes, that's right," Leland agreed, and again he knew that there was yet no way for him to go to Jeanette or explain.

"Vance saw the revolver and made a leap for me. He grabbed it and in the struggle I know he would kill me, but the revolver was discharged and then I fainted from fright. I must have come out of it speedily. Vance was on the floor, dead, but still warm—then I grabbed baby and came to you—and that is all, Leland—all, but enough to ruin my life and yours."

He quieted her after a while and they tried never to mention it after this.

Back in New York, after the first lot of copy came to Mr. Maxin, in mailed from Portland, Oregon, and signed by Paul Justin, Jeanette, notified by Mr. Maxin, took a trip out there. For three long weeks she searched everywhere and even secured a detective but there was no trace of any Paul Justin or Leland Forbes.

Naturally there wouldn't be, since Lawyer Adams of New York sent this copy to a brother lawyer in Portland to remain to the publishing house of Maxin & Company.

Mr. Maxin, himself, even joined Jeanette out there in the search, but it was all fruitless.

Heartbroken, discouraged, but still with an abiding faith in Leland, Jeanette came back east.

The winter was not very cold down there in the Grayson Hills. An enormous stove and fireplace kept the little house warm. When Spring came with its flowers and myriad birds, Leland was busier than ever.

Baby Leland was then able to walk and to talk a little. Leland built a sunny enclosure outside where he could play.

Now and then some native would ride past on horseback and paused to say "howdy," but none ever called except Harvey Orson with mail and foolstuffs.

They knew that Forbes was "hidin' out," not an uncommon thing to them. It was none of their business. If Forbes wanted them to know, he would tell them. There was no danger of their ever telling about it outside.

Jeanette went down to Wytheville.

Old black Mose and Violet greeted her kindly.

"Now, somebody sends us money to get erlong, but we ain't never seed him since he left with yo," they told her and she knew they were truthful.

Jeanette did not wear the beautiful engagement ring. That is, not on her finger, but she wore it on a fine chain, inside her clothes.

Seldom did she discuss it with her sympathetic married sister, Mrs. Kellogg.

"I still have faith in him," Jeanette declared, "and until such time as I know there is anything wrong, I shall simply regard it as a mystery."

While her sister was sympathetic, she secretly believed that Leland Forbes had backed out at the last moment for some reason that had to do with his past—and with a woman.

However, she wouldn't tell Jeanette this.

Down in the Grayson Hills Leland worked harder than ever. Lola had become rugged and strong and about as happy as she ever expected to be.

After a few years, Leland planned, they would go to South America, sail from some port there, and live in Italy or southern France under assumed names so that the youngster could be properly educated.

All of these discussions were deals to Lola, because she realized that she had just about ruined her beloved brother's career.

If she had known of his planned marriage there is no telling what she would have done and Leland knew that he must never tell her.

One day a "furriner" came. Now a "furriner" is anyone who doesn't live in those parts. He rode a handsome horse, was well dressed and keen.

Leland happened to be working in the house when they saw him ride up and stop.

"A detective," Lola gasped, clutching up her baby boy.

"Stay hidden—I'll face him. He looks very much like a detective," Leland agreed.

He stepped out and faced the man, who slid off his horse and strode up to him.

COMMUNICATION

Editor Courier:

The following bit of news was published in "The Little Stick" of Lehigh Valley in the Bucks County edition, Saturday, July 31, 1937:

SAYS ORGANIZATION BROUGHT ON RAISE

A start in the right direction has been made by the State Highway Workers of Pennsylvania. First they organized themselves under the Pennsylvania State Employees Assn., affiliate of A. F. of L., then they sought entrance to C. I. O. and were admitted and now assume the name of the State, County and Municipal Workers of America, affiliated with C. I. O.

The next step was to present a new wage scale and while that has not been accepted by the officials of the State Highway department, they have made investigations in other states and decided to give an increase of 5 cents an hour to all those now receiving 40, 45, 50 and 55 cents an hour. It does not effect anyone who now receives 60 cents an hour or more. It goes into effect immediately and all employees' rates will be changed accordingly.

These are steps in the right direction and the Highway Workers, particularly of Bucks county, who were scared to join the union in its early stages and those who are now kicking up their heels growling about this paltry 5 cents, should remember that it took a lot of coaxing to get you in the union and we won't let any one commit any hasty thing that will bring discredit on the Bucks county union and tend to break us up. It took a lot of hard work to get you organized so that your requests could be presented effectively and if you think this 5 cent raise is a paltry thing which you have gotten since you have been organized, not before, how much do you think you could get on your own initiative? Don't be foolish. Just ask yourself how much of an increase did the State Highway Workers get before they were organized and when you find the answer to that and you are one of those who are still dissatisfied, shut up and begin to do some real thinking and don't think out loud.

Sure we all feel that it is not enough and that they should pay more, but you do your duty in your organization and watch the results from that. If you put nothing in this organization you can't expect anything out of it. Think that over. Meanwhile, see to it that you attend your meetings and pay your dues.

This article should be analyzed very carefully, and I will start right at the beginning.

Referring to "a start in the right direction, by the organization of the employees" is very good.

But the next step of "presenting a wage scale"—that is a different story. At a convention in the Spring of this year a wage scale was drawn up for the Highway employees. It was presented to the State Officials, in May, before the budget had been completed. But no action was taken until July when a 5-cent an hour increase was given.

Do members know that there was to be an increase in wages, even before the Union was organized?

Do you know that Allegheny County has been receiving 50 cents an hour for two years?

Do you know that other counties have received increases before this was made public—other counties that were not organized?

Now—I will take the case of the "men being afraid to join the Union"—Can you blame them for not doing so? There was one employee that was discharged for saying he was going to try to organize the Highway Department. His case was heard September 3, 1936. It was taken before State officials, but that is all that was ever done about it.

More recently there were several men taken from the payroll. These men were efficient and were not given an opportunity to defend themselves. All were members of the organization. That incident happened five or six weeks ago. What action is being taken to put these men back to work?

This calls for lusty action when the men of an organization can be pushed around as they are. Either one of two things caused these men to lose their jobs: job discrimination or politics. And you are playing right into Mr. Fromhagen's hands when you allow things like this to go on with nothing more than a lot of words spoken.

Give the men action and give it to them quick or you won't have an organization three months from now. Who knows who will be next—it might be you!

Also from the article the command to "shut up and don't think out loud."

Wouldn't that be a nice thing for the organization to have a number of members present and not say what they think, but just sit there and allow some one to tell them what is to be done and have you and your friends give consent by your silence.

Men, do not do it! Think what you will and think aloud—the louder the better! You have as much right to your thoughts as any of your officers and you have a right to be dissatisfied until you know that things are going the way you think they should go. Do all this at the meetings.

What action is being taken about the condition of the Highway Department?

Does the Governor know that some of the men are working 12 to 16 hours a day, six days a week, for straight pay?

Does he know how Mr. Fromhagen has been working against the Union?

Does he know that Mr. Van Dyke praised and encouraged an independent or company union in Lehigh County composed of workers and the bosses of the Highway Department?

Do you realize what this 45 cents an hour means to the biggest majority of the laborers? It means from $75 to $100 per year when you take into consideration the fact that they work less than 2000 hours a year with a salary of from $600 to $800 a year.

This group includes painters and stone masons and carpenters at 55 cents an hour.

What industry has conditions as bad as these? If there are any I would like to know where they exist.

Come on, men. Wake up. You are the boss. Take a grip on yourselves and prove it. Stage a sit-down strike this coming registration and let the ones who are satisfied with 45 cents an hour go out and bring the voters in to register—and then see the results! PAT MORAN.

CLOSE GAME DROPPED BY LANDRETH TO PHILA. IX.

"Landreth Seeds" lost a close and very hard-fought game in Philadelphia last evening to Port Richmond by the score of 2 to 0. Port Richmond scored in the fifth inning on a single and a double and made their second run in the fifth inning on a single, short double and another single.

While "Landreth Seeds" had a number of men on bases they could not dent the plate, although several times they were in a scoring position. Ashby, while touched for eight hits, pitched a beautiful game, striking out six men. Gregg held the "Farmers" in check throughout, only giving up three hits and striking out four. Bowman, of Port Richmond, was the leading hitter with two singles and a double. The fielding was snappy on both sides with the exception of Olney. Port Richmond short stop, who had three errors on ground balls, all hard chances.

As is always the case when Landreth plays there, the stands were filled. The "Farmers" will play Port Richmond again within two weeks. Tonight "Landreth Seeds" play under the lights at Lansdale against the Lansdale Night Hawks, and Thursday they are on Landreth field playing the Jewish Stars.

BOWLERS PREPARE FOR BIGGEST SEASON HERE

Preparations for the biggest year in the history of the Bristol Bowling Association got under way in a meeting of the Association in the Bristol Recreation Center here Monday night.

A number of suggestions were brought up with the idea of giving those present a chance to think them over in order to be prepared to discuss them fully in the next meeting of the Association here next Tuesday night. At the same time those who were absent could be informed of the new plans so that they too might have a prominent part in the next meeting in the discussion. Moreover some of the prospective teams and their respective captains could be contacted with in regard to whether they would have a team represented in the league or not or at least something definite concerning it.

This is hoped to be the outcome of last night's meeting so as the Secretary may have the names of all teams entering the various leagues this year and their prospective line-ups by the next meeting in order that they may make definite plans and progress toward the organization of the leagues. This organization is necessary immediately in order that the league may be ready to open the season about a week after Labor Day. Therefore, it is hoped and urged by the officials and organizers that all the captains of last year's teams and other teams wishing to enter the league this year be present at the next meeting to clarify all questions of discussion together with new plans, ideas and suggestions—and if possible have prospective line-ups in to Secretary.

There are approximately 30 teams lined up for competition in four leagues this with the addition of about five or six new aggregations plus the return of nearly all of last year's teams. Some of the new teams who hope to be represented in the league this year are Hall Aluminum, Badenhausen of Cornwells, Grundy Mill, Harriman Hawks and the Bench Club of Harriman. As it now stands with 30 teams in line for a place in the league, the Association will necessarily have to divide the teams into four distinct leagues of six, eight, eight, eight respectively for the Bristol, American, National and Industrial leagues. The latter league of course being made up entirely of industrial teams of the town perhaps. Then again they may have four eight-team leagues if demand for team entrance rises any higher.

The Association will again belong to the American Bowling Congress this year which means that all alleys will again be sanctioned again by that organization before the start of the coming campaign. The league will again be divided into two halves with the winners of the respective halves combatting for the final honors next Spring unless one team wins both halves.

Last year being the first year in which the Bristol Association belonged to the A. B. C.'s they became eligible to enter the great bowling classic last spring which was held in New York. Next Spring several teams including the Barton All Stars, Harriman Hawks, Burlington All Stars, and Moffo, all hope to make the trip out to Chicago where the big classic of the year in bowling will be held.

The three main topics of discussion tonight and which will be carried over to the next meeting were:

1. A set average of any team for entrance into a particular league. That is to say that if a team has a one game average of so much they either become eligible to enter higher class or if they fail to reach the lowest average per game for the designated league they fall into the next lowest league. This plan is based on preventing a runaway race in any league and to balance all the leagues up as nearly perfect as possible.

2. Whether they should continue with a five or six man team this year. Last year they introduced the six man team idea which omitted the lowest score on each team for each game. With many this was a decided change especially with the so-called "bench-warmer" who could then get a chance to improve and to demonstrate his ability on the wooden ways. However, many too disagreed on this method because they could not get six men out on many nights and were put at a handicap with their opponents.

3. Assessments. Last year the assessment charge for three games was about seventy-five cents but this year it must necessarily be increased due to the increasing cost of the upkeep of the alleys and other incidental expenses indispensable to the game. The charge will be raised at least a dime and may reach as high as twenty-five cents but of course that is entirely up to the members of the association.

Besides these, many other topics and questions will be brought up at the next meeting to be held in the Recreation Center next Tuesday evening at eight. And all captains of the teams wishing to enter or continue in the league this year are urgently requested to be there or have a representative there at least.

GRUNDY NINE WINS THIRD PLACE IN LEAGUE

The second half chase of the Bristol Twilight League came to a close last evening on Leedom's field as the Grundy Mill team was blanked by St. Ann's, 5-0, but won the game on a forfeit because the Saints used several ineligible players. The victory for Grundy's gave them third place in the final standing, one game behind the second-place Hibernian team.

"Mike" DeRisi did the hurting for the Saints and limited the woolen mill team to three hits. He struck out six and walked one. Alf Capriotti was the losing moundman and he also allowed three hits but his mates fielded terribly behind him, committing eight errors.

Flogged Her Accuser

Interviewed, Eloise Willis, 17, of New Orleans, La., smiles with satisfaction over lashing she administered Oscar Kay, 47, because "he told lies" about her. Kay, tied to a tree and beaten in presence of a crowd, has charged the girl and her father with assault. The girl countered with charge of slander.

MILL A. C. WINS OVER CATHOLIC CLUB, 9 TO 2

The Mill A. C., after having a nip and tuck battle with the Catholic Boys Club for five innings, on Landreth field, yesterday morning, stepped into the pitches of "Flash" LaPolla and sewed up the ball game, keeping them on the heels of the "Aces" who are in first place. It was a good game up until the sixth inning. It was in the sixth that the Mill boys pushed across two runs. Not content, they came back in the seventh to push across five more and hand "Flash" LaPolla his worst defeat of the year. "Bill" Sullas, aided by good fielding, could not be touched and at any time was not in danger. A Palumbo resumed his slugging style, slamming three vicious hits, a triple, double, and single. This puts the Mill boys back in their winning ways. They will again play Thursday night when they meet the Johnson All-Stars. "Battler" Betz will toe the slab and young "Andy" Moore will receive the left-handed boy's slants.

Bucks Bankers See Montgomery Co. Farms

and newspaper publisher, which are located near Centre Square. Here Mr. Strassburger's farm manager, Mr. Sellers, briefly described the operation of the fine dairy on the farm and conducted the visitors through the large, airy, well lighted dairy barn. Here was observed the herd of pure-bred Ayrshire milk cows, some of which have been imported directly from Scotland. This herd was begun in 1928 with a foundation of 25 pure bred cows, and now numbers 285 head of cattle. Of this number, 85 head are the progeny of one herd bull now eleven years old and still in use. The total acreage in production is 1100 acres, of which 800 are located in one black surrounding the home farm.

The farm practice includes a system of rotation of crops in which the fields are continued in pasture for several years. In answer to questions, Mr. Sellers described the system of fertilizing the pastures, which includes applications of lime, either raw or hydrated, and superphosphate. This provides pasturage in such abundance that a good crop of hay is gathered in mid-summer, even after being pastured for several months. At present a good growth of luxuriant grass remains, though pastured every night. The cows are milked by hand to a large extent, and one group of twenty are milked three times a day under heavy production.

One outstanding individual cow has produced 11,000 pounds of milk during the short period of seven months, which is an unusual record. A test of four per cent butter fat is maintained in the whole herd. Mr. Sellers made the statement that the dairy herd is expected to pay its way and also finance the running expenses of the farms. Labor troubles are avoided by the employment of married men, of whom 18 are employed.

Of special interest to the visitors was a pure-bred Percheron stallion, 3½ years old, imported from France, which weighs approximately a ton and will be used for breeding purposes on the farms, where a number of Percheron mares are in use.

A significant statement made by Mr. Sellers, at the close of the visit, was that he had recently returned from Scotland, and saw no better cattle there than he is caring for right here on these farms.

The third farm visited was that of Frank Hudnut, near Centre Square, which contains 75 acres in orchards, also operating 25 acres elsewhere. A portion of this acreage is 22 years old, the remainder from 1 to 15 years old and just coming into profitable production.

Spraying is practiced from six to eight times in a season, according to variety. Of special interest at this farm was a study of a modern cold storage plant now under construction, which will have a capacity of 5,000 bushels. Mr. Hudnut anticipates a larger net farm income when this storage plant is in use as he has found it rather expensive to pay for fruit storage in commercial storage houses. He has been in the fruit business for 22 years. The storage plant will also include, when completed, a modern packing and grading shed, and also a roadside market, which is the means by which much of his fruit is marketed. In addition to his storage plant, he also expects to gradually develop an apple-butter and preserving side line, as well as enlarge his elder business which up to this time has averaged two thousand gallons per year. These latter by-products provide outlet for the owner graded apples.

The noon meal was enjoyed by the group at the Riverside Inn, Gratersford, where they were joined by 29 bankers and guests from Montgomery county. Donald Horsey, president, and J. Warren Ziegler, secretary, of the Montgomery County Bankers Association and G. Fred Berger, an official of the Pennsylvania and American Bankers Association, were here introduced to the group, as was also County Agent Waltz, who had direct charge of the tour. The Montgomery County Bankers' officials provided each of the visitors with a road map of the county, showing the location of their many historic places of interest.

The highlight of the tour, which had attracted many to join the caravan, was the visit to the new Eastern Penitentiary near Gratersford, where the entire party, not including women, was shown special privileges and taken on a tour of the entire institution by the superintendent. This modern penal institution, only ten years old, proved a revelation, as the visitors observed the cleanliness, order and system which was everywhere evident. Sixty-two acres are enclosed inside the high concrete wall, which is well guarded by men in towers on its top, and 1600 acres of farm land outside the walls are also a part of the system and are operated by inmates of the institution under supervision of officials. Every encouragement is given to prisoners who wish to improve their lives, and many of them are able to earn small daily wages by performing many of the manual tasks about the institution or on the farms. Educational courses, under instruction of suitable prisoners, are provided for those who wish them, and correspondence courses are available for additional education.

All in all, this proved one of the most interesting and instructive tours ever conducted by the Bucks County Bankers.

Bristol. Mr. and Mrs. Bright and family have a home in Miami, and this is their first experience of travelling by trailer.

Thomas brought his bicycle with him, and Caroline keeps busily engaged with her scrap-book, which when she returns home she hopes to have filled with postal cards of places she has visited. All four members of the family brought their bathing suits, and they take the opportunity to try the Northern waters whenever possible.

Men of the other four families are connected with the Fleetwheels-Coates Trailer Company, coming North with the Coates firm when it became a Fleet-wings division. George Coates was the head of the Coates Trailer Company in Florida. He and Mrs. Coates occupy one trailer, and nearby their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Coates, reside in another trailer. This is the first trip of these four and little David to Pennsylvania. They made the trip North by trailer, coming to Bristol two months ago. "The nights are splendid for sleeping," said Mrs. George Coates today. "Here near the river we have a lovely breeze, and each night we require a coverlet for sleeping."

Since their arrival in Bristol, the Coates' have visited many points of interest in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and all are pleased with the section.

Coming from Hollywood, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Neale, were originally from Atlantic City, N. J. Mr. Neale built his own trailer. When he found that he was to be connected with the Bristol firm, Mr. Neale came North immediately, and a short time later Mrs. Neale brought the trailer North. This is the second trailer built by Mr. Neale. For a short time they resided in the first trailer they built, while in Florida.

If any member of the trailer colony is enjoying a thorough rest, it is Mrs. W. K. Stineman, formerly of Indianapolis, Ind., and more recently of Florida. While living in Indianapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Stineman had a nine-room home. Then for a lengthy time Mrs. Stineman had an enterprise at her home, where private parties were planned and conducted in her residence. "We had as many as 300 and 400 people at parties during three and four days. And for some time we averaged a wedding a week. You can well imagine the work entailed. And I am just relaxing and thoroughly enjoying it." Now the Stinemans and their son live in one-room trailer and like it. "We visited in Florida one winter, and while there purchased a trailer and made it our home. After returning to Indiana for a stay in our own home, we again went to Florida last year and purchased a new trailer." Mr. Stineman became connected with the Coates Trailer Company, and came to Bristol with the concern.

Captain Apple Jack

Barring His Way to the Title

By BURNLEY

Max Schmeling, who thought he had gained his second shot at the heavy title last Summer when he belted out Joe Louis, may have to cool his heels for another year or more before getting his long-awaited title bout.

The man Max flattened more than a year ago, Joe Louis, now holds the heavyweight crown which Max believes is rightfully his. Schmeling, aware that he might be frozen out of a title crack this year, tried to arrange a bout with Tommy Farr in England, but the crafty Mike Jacobs cornered Farr as an August victim for Louis, and Max was left holding the well-known burlap.

The Louis board of strategy has a reason for keeping Schmeling waiting. They know that the Teuton is no youth, and each passing day adds to the growing burden of age and ring rust he must carry when—and if—he finally meets the Brown Bomber again.

It is even possible that Max will never get his promised title shot. Old Harry Wills was the logical contender for Dempsey's crown, and he waited eight years for a title go, all in vain.
